may have a better evening and a crowded house.

The Fair at Ypsilanti.

On Thursday last we visited the Fair of the Washtenaw and Wayne Union Agricultural Society. The show, in most of the departments, was good, but not so extensive as usual. We did not learn the number of entries in the different departments. The show of vegetables was very fine. The show of fruit was also fine but not very extensive. We saw some excellent specimens of wheat and other grain. There was some fine stock exhibited, and the show of horses was good. In the department of Fine Arts we saw a splendid lot of photographs and paintings, several picture frames of leather work and pine cones were very nice, and there were many fine specimens of needlework.

The address, by Hon. E. LAWRENCE, was a very able effort. We have heard that the Society have requested a copy for publication. Hoping that the request may be granted, we will make no report of it. We are sorry that the driving upon the track was not discontinued during the address, as it occasioned much unnecessary confusion and many failed to hear the speaker, although he spoke very loud. At the close of the address the orator was voted an honorary member of the Society.
